3. Program Review Process and Planning
ASGC reviewed the final program review forms for Instruction, Learning Support Centers, and Student Services, and the webpages where key institutional planning documents can be readily accessed.

There will no longer be different comprehensive and annual forms. Each program will conduct a program review annually, with emphasis on continuous improvement in student learning, and aiding the college with short-term and long-term planning. Live links take you to the documents you need to review in completing the program review. It’s not a “one size fits all” form. Different programs are left to address and emphasize different things.

It is important for the program review to guide college planning not merely list needs for more positions, resources, equipment, instructional materials, etc. Yet items not listed in program review are unlikely to be provided.
The eventual goal is to create online forms in order to streamline planning process by making program review data more accessible through an online database.

During the discussion, members offered the following suggestions:

- Provide sample program reviews (examples to emulate).
- Greater feedback after faculty turn in their program reviews.

The section on Equipment and Technology requests raised lots of questions as to the meaning of “for ongoing program operations.” Is this for routine maintenance or supplies? Or only for new expenses/items? Several speakers suggested that this question needs clarification. Amy Sobel suggested that faculty should ask their deans for clarification.

Position requests require a separate form. This form asks for the specific criteria that the college uses to evaluate program review requests, streamlining the process.

Meeting adjourned at 4:05 pm.
